developersDen Achieves Microsoft Partner Program Development Solutions Competency and Data Management Solutions Competency

developersDen recently achieved both the Microsoft Partner Program's Development Solutions Competency and the Data Management Solutions Competency. These competencies are awarded to Microsoft Partners who have demonstrated a proficiency in creating custom software development solutions and database management solutions for their customers. With over 12 years of experience providing software analysis, design, and development services to various industries, developersDen has distinguished itself, with its customers, as a solution provider rather than "just another contractor". Our strict focus on customer service and adherence to our core values of Integrity, Quality, and Trust separate us from our competitors.

We are uniquely positioned to leverage our real-world software development project successes, combined with in-depth product knowledge gained from our technical training experience to provide our customers with the best of current technologies applied intelligently to address your system requirements.

The Training and Learning Consortium Announces Technology Partnership with developersDen

The Training and Learning Consortium (TLC) and developersDen are pleased to announce the formation of a technology partnership to provide the highest level of technology service and products to TLC. At the heart of this exciting partnership is the new TLC website which provides a powerful web-based learning management system and information portal. The new website is designed around developersDen's LMS Pro, a learning management portal built upon the powerful technology of Microsoft's SQL Server 2005 database server, combined with the ASP.NET web application technology framework. In addition to providing the new website, developersDen has been designated as the "Preferred Technology Provider" for TLC.
